

Are You Concerned You Won't Qualify for Medicaid Under the New Laws? (passed Feb 8 2006)

Good planning opportunities still exist. However, because it's more difficult than ever to qualify for Medicaid, you will need a knowledgeable attorney to advise you on the complexities of Medicaid Planning. This process employs strategies that allow you to qualify for Medicaid while legally retaining control of your assets.

When we meet with you we will:

- Carefully analyze your situation.
- Expertly plan strategies for protecting your assets, your home, and loved-ones that may depend on you financially.
- Explain how to avoid incurring costly penalties that delay your eligibility.
- Patiently take the time to help you understand the laws and all your options.
- Treat you with the highest level of respect and service.
- Earn your trust with your family and financial information.
- Prove to you that the benefits of planning will far exceed the cost of planning.
- Make the process easy by guiding you each step of the way.
- Give you peace of mind knowing that you've ensured your ability to receive healthcare without losing your assets.

There's no time for delay. Because of the new Medicaid laws passed on February 8, 2006 there are some very important actions you must NOT do, or else risk jeopardizing your ability to qualify.
